MP confident insurers will renew policy on flood-risk properties

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

SEVERE wet weather has sparked fresh calls for the Government to draw up a new pact with insurers to protect the borough's flood-risk properties from sky-high premiums.

People living in Sittingbourne and Sheppey, which is in the top 10 most at-risk areas of the UK, could face rocketing insurance costs or will be unable to get covered altogether if the current deal is not renewed.

The existing contract – due to run out in June 2013 – obliges insurers to provide cover for flood-risk homes as long as the Government improves flood defences.

According to figures from the Association of British Insurers, some 4,295 properties are currently under threat of flooding in Sittingbourne and Sheppey.

An e-petition has been set up by the Labour Party in Folkestone and Hythe – another at-risk area – calling for a new deal to ensure protection of Kent's most threatened homes.

But while pressure mounts, Tory MP for Sittingbourne and Sheppey, Gordon Henderson says he is confident the agreement will be renewed before the expiry date.

His comments follow a speech in the House of Commons by environment secretary Caroline Spelman who reassured MPs that the Government was in "constructive" negotiations with the insurance industry regarding the renewal of the contract.

Mr Henderson said he was positive a renewed agreement would be implemented before next June.

He also stressed that much of the flood-risk area in his constituency was

Excitement of torch relay

THOUSANDS turned the streets of Kent into a non-stop party this week as the county enjoyed an injection of the feel-good factor thanks to the arrival of the Olympic Torch Relay.

The iconic Olympic flame spent three days in the county – more than any other in the UK – as it neared the end of its 70-day, 8,000 mile trek across the nation.

It arrived for a brief visit to Swale yesterday afternoon, as it was carried through the streets of Faversham.

And next Friday it will enter the Olympic Stadium, officially spark the start of London 2012.

But this week it was all about the torch being shown the very best in Kentish hospitality – with lavish overnight stops in Dover on Wednesday night and Maidstone on Thursday, where it was given a warm welcome and the crowds entertained by entertainers such as the Rizzle Kicks.

The stars of the week, however, were the torchbearers, as they enjoyed their moment to shine when they carried the torch through the streets.

Finding sunshine and crowds in Tunbridge Wells on Tuesday, day, an off-shoot of the flame was even carried to Tonbridge Castle by Hildenborough double-gold winner Kelly Holmes. It emerged in Kent once more on Wednesday, working its way along the south coast.

Picture: LO006

And the turn-out proved valuable to local shops too, with town centres bustling and eager to pick up the extra custom.

David Jukes, leader of Tunbridge Wells Borough Council, said: "It was a fantastic day, a once-in-a-lifetime celebration. The people of Tunbridge Wells did us proud turning out in such great numbers."

The torch leaves Kent later today (Friday) after travelling through the Medway towns.

Time is running out for flood risk homes uninhabited and that extensive flood defences put in place on the north coast of Sheppey meant there was good protection.

"Having said that, one road at risk of flooding is still one road too many, so I'm hopeful the agreement will be put in place quickly, particularly with the recent wet weather," he said. "I'm confident a new agreement will be in place before June next year."

The e-petition calls on the Government to renew the existing deal. If it collects 100,000 signatures it will prompt a debate in Parliament.

Labour member Peter Wallace, who set up the e-petition, said: "People in high-risk areas need assurance now to know their homes are secure. Rumours are circulating a number of insurance companies are preparing to hike insurance premiums after the agreement expires, which will leave many unable to afford insurance."

In Kent, some 34,000 homes are at risk of flooding.

Environment secretary Caroline Spelman reassured MPs households would be protected.

"We are at an advanced stage in negotiations with the insurance industry on alternative arrangements for when the statement of principles expires this time next year," she said.

Otto Thoresen, director general of the ABI, said insurers wanted to make sure households had access to affordable insurance, adding: "We are running out of time to make sure people in high-risk areas are properly protected from the devastation flooding can cause and the ball is now in the Government's court."

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Cannabis charge

A MAN has been charged with producing cannabis on Sheppey.

It follows a police raid on a property on July 12 after a tip -off that cannabis plants were being grown.

Matthew Joseph Burden, 32, of Chequers Road, Minster on Sea, is charged with producing the controlled drug.

He will appear at Maidstone Magistrates Court on August 8.

➔ Messing about on boats

BOATS will line Faversham Creek this weekend for the Faversham Nautical Festival.

Thames barges, smacks and traditional boats will all be on display as part of the event, organised by the Kentish Sail Association.

The festival, which runs from 10am to 6pm Saturday and Sunday, will feature music at TS Hazard, the town quay and Front Bents.

There will also be displays from the Cambria Trust and other maritime groups.

➔ Jobs open day success

MORE than 400 jobseekers attended pharmaceutical company Aesica's open day this month.

The drugs firm is creating 100 new jobs by 2015 as part of expansion plans at its Queenborough site.

Jobseekers learnt more about the roles being created and spoke to senior staff.

Unemployed former steel worker Mick Gisby from Sheppey said: "I have been out of work since January so attending this open day has really felt like a positive step."

CAMPAIGN

DRINK warns: We must be ready to act if airport takes off or nose dives

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

PEOPLE power is emerging in the Thames Estuary airport campaign, with protesters setting up a commission to discuss the controversial issue.

In a rally call, pressure group Demand Regeneration in North Kent (DRINK) urged political leaders to get involved in a "grown up" debate on the vital issue.

Chairman Neville Gaunt said DRINK had formed a commission of interested local people to find out the answers to the key question: What will the impact be from the hub airport?

He stressed that, whatever the final outcome, the area needed to be ready.

"As the time draws near for the Government to publish its consultation document on aviation policy, there is a growing belief that our communities need to be prepared to face the consequences of the decision," he said.

"If the green light is given for one or other of the proposals, we will have to be ready with our response as failure to do this will mean we cannot hope to get the best deal for our people.

"If the ideas which impact directly on north Kent are all turned down, we will have to find ways, using little or no public cash, to generate the prosperity we desperately need to eliminate poverty and give our children a positive future."

Members of DRINK stress the group is neither pro nor anti-airport, with their agenda being to create jobs and prosperity in the area.

Campaign director at DRINK, Clive Lawrence, said all people want is a resolution. He said: "This

FACTS: The regeneration group says it's important we know all the facts surrounding the airport plan isn't about pro or anti-airport – this is about being prepared and getting the best of what we can from whatever outcome there is.

"We want more jobs and more prosperity; a better future for everyone. Some of us at DRINK think an airport will deliver that and some of us think it won't – but we need to find out.

"How can we say yes or no until we have more information?

"This is why we've set up a commission, to find out the facts from people who know."

He said a report would be published in around a month's time ahead of the Government consultation, which was delayed for a second time last week.

The anticipated review, which is wanted from both supporters and opposition of the airport, was first scheduled for March and pushed back until July. Now it has been delayed again, this time until the autumn.

Mr Lawrence accused politicians of dithering, calling them "cowards" for not pushing ahead with a decision over the controversial issue.

Anti-airport campaigners said this delay had once again left the people of north Kent in limbo.

A spokesman for Protect Kent, the county's branch of the Campaign to Protect Rural England, said it was extremely disappointed.

"We feel that the sooner the consultation is held, the sooner we can get these plans dismissed and residents of north Kent will know they are safe from this potentially environmentally devastating proposal," he said.

Options for an estuary airport include 'Boris Island' – London Mayor Boris Johnson's proposal for an airport on reclaimed land off the north Kent coast. Another is from architect Lord Foster, who released plans for an international transport hub on Grain.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Free kids' face painting

CHILDREN will be able to get their face painted for free at two special events being hosted by The Forum shopping centre this summer holiday.

The Sittingbourne complex will have a face painter on hand between 11am to 4pm on both August 10 and 25. Centre manager Colin Bell said: "This is a great opportunity to keep the kids entertained whilst adults do their shopping and even better, it won't cost a thing."

Russian team join fun

RUSSIAN Olympic stars joined the thousands on the streets of Faversham for the Olympic Torch Relay yesterday.

The equestrian eventing team have been preparing for London 2012 with a training camp at Eyehorn Farm near Sittingbourne.

They joined in the fun on Thursday and also this week attended a civic reception hosted by Swale council's top brass - among them the mayor, leader and chief executive.

Demelza charity effort

A CHARITY team will pound the streets next week as part of a major 30-mile fundraising effort in aid of Bobbing-based children's hospice Demelza.

The purple-clad team from Reynolds Fitness Spa will run and ride from its club in Bexley to Sittingbourne High Street. The feat gets under way at 11.30am on Friday and is expected to be complete by 4pm.

Anticipation soars for hop festival

BUSINESS is gearing up for Faversham Hop Festival as months of preparation builds for the town's biggest weekend.

The annual event, which draws thousands of visitors, takes place across the weekend of September 1-2.

And businesses are gearing up to ensure they cash in.

Harvey Alexander, who runs the model shop in West Street, is looking at a gift with a difference – a model rail truck bearing the festival's distinctive hop logo.

He said: "If the model is a success then it is something we can produce for succeeding festivals, also coming up with something different as time moves on."

Also innovating is Nick Green, owner of Jittermugs in Preston Street. He's busily producing treats including a Hop Festival Fruit Blast drink made with lime and passion fruit, which he hopes will get taste buds racing.

Mr Green and his team are also perfecting a sandwich to reflect the festival colours.

He added: "We have designed festival postcards and we'll be devising a menu to identify with the weekend. Last year was overwhelming but having had the experience we know how to cope. I'm looking forward to it."

Chris Barkaway is already planning for the 2,000 speciality pies and countless sausage rolls needed for the shop and the stall his long-established butchers operates.

His stall has been to every one of the 23 festivals and, next to Christmas, he says it is the town's busiest period.

Mr Barkaway said: "The hop festival brings a lot of people who wouldn't necessarily stop here. They see what Faversham has to offer and they come back."

SPECIAL REPORT by Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

IN APRIL of this year, an official drought was declared.

Hosepipes were banned, farmers were in despair and fears were the county would struggle to recover this year.

No-one could have imagined that just days later the skies would open and deliver a downpour that would last on and off for months, leaving the Kent economy with a bill potentially running into the millions.

Experts from the Country Land and Business Association told this newspaper the overall cost to the county's rural industry alone since April was £3.5 million. Adding to that losses made in tourism, retail and sporting events, that figure is likely to triple leaving a huge hole in Kent's economy.

Popular tourist attractions have experienced a major drop in visitors, festival organisers expecting sell-out shows have struggled to get rid of tickets, and sports clubs – particularly cricket – have admitted losing hundreds of thousands of pounds due to low crowd turnouts and washouts.

Just last week the Kent County Show was forced to close its gates for the first time in 83 years after torrential rain turned car parks into mud baths. Visitor numbers were down 17,000 on last year and organisers hinted at a loss of more than £300,000.

But perhaps more worrying is the impact on small, independent traders already struggling to recover from the current economic crisis.

Business experts warn the recent wet weather could bang the final nail in the coffin for many.

Farmers growing soft fruit have seen their produce damaged by rain and fungal moulds caused by damp, and local farmer and NFU member Kevin Attwood said if the rain continues it will be "disastrous" for arable crops.

ECONOMY

Ten million reasons as to why our economy is paying the price for a summer of downpours

A WASHOUT: Agriculture has been hit very badly

Chief executive of the Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce Jo James said the overall cost was probably incalculable.

"To even estimate the cost of the miserable summer weather to business in Kent is well nigh impossible; the only thing that can be said is that it is very high," she said.

"The ramifications are widely spread. Doubtless the major sufferer is agriculture; unless crops are in a controlled environment under glass or plastic, the impact is severe – even where crop yields are not affected, which many are, harvesting is a nightmare. Animal husbandry also suffers, winter forage crops and harvesting are affected, and efficient management of pastures under sodden ground conditions is difficult. The damage goes much deeper than just physical effects to the land, however.

"I know that all retailers are failing to experience the usual increase in customer numbers associated with the summer season, and clothes retailers especially are finding that summer fashions are not moving well."

Tourism has also suffered a major knock with outdoor attractions seeing drops in visitors.

Latest research from tourism board Visit Kent shows that in May alone visits to the county's gardens were down 30 per cent and heritage attractions 14 per cent.

Statistics released by Visit Kent last year showed the average spend per tourist on overnight stays was almost £50 and for an average trip over £130.

KOS COMMENT

OUR prayers for sunshine may soon be answered with weather forecasters predicting warmer climes for the next few weeks.

This gives us the perfect opportunity to help all those affected by the miserable weather and give our local economy a much-needed boost.

So get out and visit your favourite tourist attractions, go and watch some sport or pay a visit to the often forgotten, but frequently inspiring high street.

And with the school holidays upon us, families should take advantage of days off to enjoy all the delights our county has to offer.

You don't have to spend a lot to give the economy a lift, so let's help each other to bring a bit more sunshine to Kent's businesses.

In 2009, visitors contributed more than £2.6 billion to the county's economy. A reduction in visitor numbers over three of the most crucial months is likely to have left a huge dent in the economy.

But Visit Kent chief executive Sandra Matthews-Marsh said while the rainy weather has meant a slow start for tourism business, hopes of a sunny spell – forecast to kick-in this weekend – could be about to come true.

"A good period of settled warm weather now will help us all catch up.

"It will really encourage our many Olympic Games visitors to get out and about in the county and discover all of the great places to visit."

But while some are optimistic the Olympics could help boost the hard-hit Kent economy, others are not so sure.

Kent and Medway chairman of the Federation of Small Businesses, Roger House, stressed the wet weather would have hit small traders hard and the Olympics would be unlikely to help with recovery.

"It's pretty obvious people haven't been going out as much, but it's the retail side that will have suffered the most," he said.

"People are always going to buy their food and so supermarkets, which sell a range of stuff, will be okay. It's the high street that will suffer.

"There will be no impulse buys and people will go to the big indoor shopping centres. I imagine it has hit smaller shops very hard.

"Many will have bought in stock and not be able to get rid of it. While they may make money back eventually, it's the initial cash flow that's the problem and that is crucial to a small business.

"It's banging the final nail in the coffin which will have a knock-on effect on employment. The ripple effect could be horrendous."

Sports clubs have also been hit hard.

Kent County Cricket Club saw losses in excess of £50,000 in just one week when Tunbridge Wells Cricket Week was washed out by rain.

And chief executive Jamie Clifford said a combination of poor sales of tickets, and food and beverages at the ground could see the club battling a six-figure loss.

"We can't just put more days on as it's all run on a schedule. It's very hard to recoup money back. The crowds have really been affected. If half of the day is going to be a washout, people won't come."

Mr Clifford said he was hoping the sun would be out for Canterbury Cricket Week next month.

Traders hit hard after county show mud bath sees 17,000 less visitors

ORGANISERS of the Kent County Show are offering tickets to next year's event to pre-booked ticket holders who were unable to attend last week because of the rain.

It followed three days of muddy chaos where car parks had to be closed due to torrential downpours. After just three hours of the first day gates were closed to the public wishing to drive in.

Despite work to improve the parking conditions, including laying 200 tonnes of bark chippings, visitors were urged to travel by bus or taxi which stopped many from attending.

On the third day the damage had already been done and organisers decided to close the show at 4pm instead of 6pm.

Visitor numbers were down

17,000 from 67,000 in 2011, to 50,000 this year and reports are financial losses could be in excess of £300,000.

Chairman of the Federation for Small Businesses, Roger House, said those trading at the event would have suffered hugely. He said: "It's not just on the day, but all the unseen costs in planning and time out of the office."

Web film hopes to capture more visitors

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

A FILM capturing the best of Faversham has been released in an effort to boost the town's tourism trade.

A Great Day Out is a six-minute video showcasing all the town has to offer, from places to eat and shop to attractions to visit.

More than 80 people packed out the café gallery at Creek Creative in Abbey Street at a meeting last week for the grand unveiling of the video, which Faversham.org had commissioned. The website hired director Ed Boyle and his producer partner Jane Ladds to create the film, which was recorded in May.

The idea came after Lucy Guthrie, manager of the faversham.org website, saw the town was not represented on YouTube.

She said: "We felt we could really put something together to promote visiting Faversham."

Faversham.org is an online guide to the area and provides free pages for charities, clubs and societies.

Ms Guthrie hopes the film will not only bring tourism to the area, but encourage businesses to create their own promotional videos.

Faversham Traders chair Sharon Yates said: "The Great Day Out in Faversham film features many shops, businesses and attractions and highlights the extent to which they make up the town's appeal and identity.

"Our businesses not only provide essential services to the community, but also attract shop-

HUNDREDS have already flocked to internet video site YouTube to watch the clip on Faversham, just days after it was released. And here's how you can join them.

The film – A Great Day Out – captures the diversity of the town, and includes shopkeepers opening up, artists, swimmers at the pool and clips from the recent historic vehicle weekend which attracted thousands to the town. In addition, there are scenes capturing the tranquil beauty of the Oare Marshes.

pers and visitors from a wider area. They realise Faversham is both a lovely place to visit and a town which meets their shopping needs."

Ms Guthrie said the response to the video has been phenomenal, with more than 500 views on YouTube already.

One comment on the site read: "I live here and there's so much to do and see, my heart is with this historic place."

During last week's meeting Ms Yates gave a presentation on the value of the town's traders working together.

Ms Guthrie said: "The evening was an absolute success with many businesses represented. Not only was it informative, it was a wonderful way for businesses to meet one another and network. The buzz and energy in the room was fabulous and I was so encouraged by the positive feel of the evening that even the rain couldn't dampen. There is such a feeling of collaboration and positivity amongst the traders."

Also revealed at the meeting were key findings from a recent public consultation into the town.

The consultation found residents like shopping in Faversham because they find staff friendly and helpful.

They also like its range of independent businesses but want to see a men's clothes shop.

The results of the Faversham 2020 Town Action Plan consultation will be out later this year.

Football stars of the future learn new skills at academy

By James Benjamin

yourswale@kosmedia.co.uk

BUDDING young David Beckham and Theo Walcotts are set to emerge from a new hotbed of football talent as they finish off their studies and brush-up their skills at Sittingbourne Community College.

Sittingbourne Football Academy has only been up and running for a year, and last week it cemented its relationship with the town's senior non-league side as the academy team locked horns on the pitch.

Although poor weather forced the match to be called off due to a water-logged pitch with the game at half-time showing Ryman League Sittingbourne leading 2-0.

However, all the academy players and their guests were invited to the Brickies' Bourne Park ground for both the club and academy to learn more about what each could offer.

A spokesman for the school said: "The academy is very hopeful that some of the footballers will go on to play in the Sittingbourne first team this season and we will continue to become a regular scouting ground in the future."

The Sittingbourne Football Academy offers more than six hours of coaching a week, along with a weekly game in the Youth Conference. Those taking part can combine their love of the game with a sound academic course by studying A-levels at Sittingbourne Community College.

Year 11 student Ronnie Ward said: "I am going to be a squad member of Sittingbourne Football Academy and I am also going to study maths A-level and sport BTEC level 3. Football does not affect studies in any way."

"Having a football academy at Sittingbourne Community College is a great opportunity for young football players because they are able to play football and have excellent academic studies available."

Children learn true horrors of Nazi concentration camp from survivor of Holocaust

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

A SURVIVOR of one of the notorious Nazi concentration camps made a moving presentation to youngsters this week, explaining the horror of the Holocaust.

Professor Ladislaus Lob, 79, visited Queen Elizabeth Grammar School in Faversham last week as part of its Holocaust Awareness Day events.

The professor gave an hour-long talk to 120 Year 9 students about his time spent at the West German concentration camp Bergen-Belsen that saw thousands die.

Mr Lob was born in Hungary, but in 1944, aged just 11, he was sent to the camp along with his father and 1,700 Hungarian Jews. His mother had died of TB.

He was sent to the camp by Nazi SS Lieutenant Colonel Adolf Eichmann – one of the major organisers of the Holocaust.

Notorious for its overcrowding, the camp had originally been built for 5,000 prisoners; primarily to use in exchange for German prisoners of war.

However, it would end up housing more than 50,000 as the Nazi's waged their ideological war.

Remarkably, he was released five months later after a deal brokered between Eichmann and Hungarian Jew Rudolf Kastner.

Along with his father, Lob fled from Germany into the relative safety of Switzerland, where he lived for 19 years.

His exploits were captured in a book he penned about Kastner's rescue called Dealing with Satan.

Prof Lob said: "Belsen got worse after I left, but it was bad enough.

"We were crammed into wooden huts; 100 people in a room sleeping in bunks infested with bugs and bed lice."

He said despite the situation they could do more or less what they wanted. His group was made up of scientists, artists and poets.

One of the infamous rituals of the camps was roll-call.

Prof Lob said: "We would stand outside in any sort of weather sometimes for two, three hours. We did not know what was happening to the people left behind or what was going to happen to us."

After moving to England in 1963, he taught German at the University of Sussex in Brighton, where he now lives with his wife Sheila.

He has spent recent months speaking to children at schools as part of the Holocaust Educational Trust to raise awareness of the tragedy.

History teacher Michael Salvage said: "The personal stories of these people are more productive than any history book or any lesson. The pupils were absolutely brilliant and asked encouraging questions, it was a productive day.

"I think holocaust education is one of the most important things I can ever teach."

BRUTAL TRUTH: Professor Lob was only 11 when he was taken to Bergen-Belsen

Bank's dim view over credit card conundrum

Q I LOST my credit card, or it may have been stolen. In the two days before I missed it and told my bank, someone used the card and I have been told I am responsible for about £800 of bills they ran up.

A THIS is unusual, unless there is something you have not mentioned.

The basic rule is that cardholders can be held responsible for a maximum of £50 if the card was used by someone else without their permission.

Perhaps the card company believes you used the card and are trying to sidestep the bill. Perhaps it believes you let someone else use your card, while you could prove you were elsewhere. Or did a family member know where you kept the card?

You have not mentioned the PIN. Did anyone else know your number? When the card was misused, was the PIN entered correctly – and if so, did you have it written down with the card?

Tell the bank you dispute the demand. Ask for the bank's evidence, and mention everything I have said. Then, if you and your friends and family seem to be in the clear, appeal to the Financial Ombudsman (0800 023 4567).

Q SOME years ago, I took in a lodger and was allowed to charge rent of £80 a week without paying income tax.

I am thinking of doing the same thing again, so has the tax-free figure been increased?

A SORRY, but this tax exemption has been frozen at £4,250 a year, or just over £81 a week.

Q MY son's business collapsed and he may be made bankrupt. He had told us that if all else failed, he could retire after being discharged from bankruptcy, but now he is very worried as it seems he could lose his pension.

His mother and I cannot afford much help as we are both over 80.

A I AM afraid the law is a mess on whether the pension plan of someone who goes bankrupt can be seized for their creditors.

In 1999, Parliament passed a law that said anyone going bankrupt could be ordered to make payments from their income – including pension – for up to three years.

However, a recent court case has gone further.

A man in his late-50s went bankrupt, and the court decided to behave as if his pension had begun. He was ordered to take a quarter of his pension plan in a lump sum and hand it over, with three years of pension on top even though he had not drawn it.

TONY HETHERINGTON

This makes the law a gamble. If your son is old enough to draw on his pension savings, he can be forced to do so. If he is younger, he can't.

There may be an appeal, but this is where we stand now. If your son can draw his pension, he may lose a big chunk of it. Sad, but true.

Q IS IT legally possible to turn down a bequest under someone's will?

I have been told a relative has left me something in his will that I do not want. He is still alive, so should I reject it now? This could be a problem as I am not supposed to know that I am a beneficiary.

A THIS is not as rare a situation as you might think. For example, beneficiaries often turn down bequests that involve expense, such as a timeshare or a property that would cost more to repair than it is worth.

You could try to hint to the relative now that the bequest would be unwelcome. But if this does not work, you are perfectly entitled to reject it later.

Q I REQUESTED my cash Isa be transferred to the Royal Bank of Scotland.

A month later, it had not happened. I was told to fill in a form, but now I have not received the form, either. Will I lose interest on my money for these lost weeks?

A BANKS are supposed to complete Isa transfers within 15 working days.

The fault may lie with the original bank dragging its feet over switching your money to RBS.

Do complain, and make clear you are not prepared to lose the interest.

Incidentally, some companies such as Halifax and Nationwide say they will pay interest from the day you apply to move your Isa to them, even though they have not yet got your cash.

At risk of flooding? Then you need to be prepared

Thousands of homes have already been flooded this summer, and more may yet be hit, says ADAM AIKEN

By Adam Aiken
MyMoney24 editor

INSURERS have spent the past few weeks dealing with claims from across the country as the wet weather has continued.

The flooding has been on a scale not seen for several years, and there is no reason to think the problems are all over yet.

People who have been victims of the bad weather will have started down the path of trying to put their lives back together, but it is important for people who have not been affected to remain wary of the situation. Their luck could yet change.

Even if you live in a part of the country that does not seem at serious risk, sudden storms can cause flash floods and localised problems.

"Homeowners who think they may be at risk can take steps to minimise the effects of any potential damage," said Tim Downes a claims-consultant manager at Lloyds TSB.

"As well as monitoring local news and weather updates, homeowners should look at home insurance policy documents to check their cover details should they need to make a claim."

There are fears the number of flood-related claims will lead to higher home-insurance premiums in the future.

Lloyds TSB reported a 52pc increase in storm-related claims last month compared with a year earlier, and a 50-fold increase in flood claims.

Ian Clark, insurance partner at Deloitte, said: "Previous experience has shown that wide-scale flooding has a significant impact on the level of claims borne by insurance companies, and in recent years has tipped them into losses for their household accounts. The overall impact of this will almost certainly be further premium rises for policyholders as insurers seek to recover the losses they have made."

The current problems coincide with the five-year anniversary of the floods in 2007 that caused nearly £2.5bn of losses to the insurance industry.

But Carole Gallagher, head of property claims at Aviva, said there was no simple link between a set of claims and future premiums.

"As far as claim volumes are concerned, the recent bad weather is not comparable to the claims experience of summer 2007," she said.

"Premiums are based on a long-term view of weather-related claims.

IF YOU HAVE BEEN FLOODED...

- Get in touch with your insurance company and report any damage as soon as possible. Photographs of the damage might help speed along a claim, and keep any ruined property because your insurer might want to inspect it.
- Listen to local weather reports in case further rainfall is forecast.
- Do not reconnect any of your mains supplies until they have been checked by qualified engineers. Similarly, make sure any appliances have fully dried out and have been checked by a qualified electrician or a Gas-Safe registered engineer before using them. Do not attempt to redecorate before your home has fully dried out.

IF YOU ARE AT RISK...

- Turn off your gas, electricity and water mains supplies, and unplug any electrical items.
- If you have more than one storey, take as many of your things upstairs as possible. Electrical items in particular should be taken upstairs, as well as expensive items, sentimental possessions that cannot be replaced and furniture.
- If possible, put sandbags outside doors, airbricks and windows.
- Put the lid down on the loo and put something heavy, such as bricks, on top to stop the water coming in that way. Likewise, put plugs in baths and sinks and weight them down. If you do not have a sandbag, try a pillowcase or a plastic bag weighed down with some soil.
- Listen to the radio for weather updates.
- Think about pets – are they out of harm's way, and do you have some food and water for them?
- If you have waterproof plastic bags, use them to seal documents such as your insurance policy and any other emergency or medical details you might need. If you need to leave your home, take it with you – along with any medication.
- Are your neighbours fully prepared? In particular, do any vulnerable or elderly people living nearby need any help?

"One weather event on its own does not usually have a wide-ranging impact on premiums, and as far as flood is concerned, we consider each property individually."

This summer's problems have once again highlighted potential problems for tens of thousands of homeowners next year.

On July 1, the obligation for insurers to offer flood coverage to all properties will expire.

Mohammad Khan, insurance partner at PwC, said: "Given the recent weather, it is likely that the owners of 200,000 properties exposed to flood risk might find it unaffordable to purchase protection. Homeowners may have to do more personally to protect their properties."

Stopping the gerrymandering

Matthew Graham proposes a new reform for the House of Lords where only those with experience get to wield the power to oppose government

THE recent Parliamentary debate on House of Lords reform did more to suck the life out of the coalition government than it did to give the Mother of Parliaments the much needed kiss of life.

All agreed on the need for surgery, but this piece of legislation was a hysterectomy to cure a hernia.

The legislation was a disaster and rightfully opposed.

This reform is constitutional constipation, an impasse in which all the king's horses and men cannot produce a meaningful settlement, meaning 650 MPs and more than 800 Peers are going around in circles.

The political establishment has fallen between two equally unworkable ideas of an elected or appointed second chamber, or even a hybrid of the two.

bour, to come up with an alternative, but no one did. Well if you can't pull the sword from the stone it's time to let someone else try.

The issues are well known. An elected second chamber challenges the primacy of the first, or if the electorate show no interest, it will lack the very legitimacy a vote should convey. Any election will strengthen the party machine in one huge step backwards. The appointment system however serves the party and Prime Minister of the day.

The accusation is always one of cronyism. Between this rock and a hard place the problem is not that our MPs cannot think outside the box, but rather they cannot follow the logic of their own principles.

The objective is to create an independent second chamber, free from patronage, the party machine, the auction of an election, enjoying public confidence, which is capable of revising government legislation. So why not design a solution to match?

The answer is to populate the second chamber with only those people who have served in the first but to do this by right.

As a right it will be to our constitution as 'habeas corpus' is to the law.

Anyone who has served as an MP in the first chamber can, upon losing their seat, claim the right to enter the second. Every MP will have stood before the electorate, possibly several times.

A landslide election automatically sends more Peers into the second chamber from the other political traditions, hence a natural built in check and balance.

Who better to scrutinise government legislation than the people who know how government works and with the experience of writing it? After all, if MPs are not good enough to do this much, what are they doing there in the first place?

The party machine and patronage disappears entirely from the second chamber. As a Peer that person becomes wholly independent.

They will not be allowed to serve as Ministers in a government, which is a form of electoral fraud. There is no rivalry to the Commons. It is a completely transparent system.

Some people will feel Lords reform is not urgent, but our current crises have been created through an all-powerful executive in a weak Parliament.

This way the second chamber is renewed as an independent revising body to correct the executive free from the stain of party and patronage, or the electoral auction, and maybe tackling our current crises begins with getting the constitution right?

Fill the second chamber with only those who have served in the first

We urge you to help local economy boom

WITH any luck, by the time you read this the sun will be out, our high streets packed and our tourist attractions doing a roaring trade. And after four months of non-stop rain we all, surely, deserve it.

In a year when the economy was already savagely biting at us all, it was particularly cruel the weather should conspire against us too and blow such a gaping hole in the county's economy.

As a result, it has never been more important to back the county's traders and tourism hot-spots. We urge all of our readers to make a special effort to invest in the local economy over the remainder of the summer to help plug the gap left by what so far has been a wash-out of a summer.

Torch lights up Kent

WHATEVER your view on the Olympic Games, the sight of thousands of people welcoming the iconic flame through our streets this week has been heartening.

Hopefully the feel-good factor it generated will continue for the rest of the summer. Just cross your fingers it will be bathed in beautiful, warm sunshine.

What's wrong with Manston?

GOVERNMENT bodies or individuals are forever making vague pronouncements about airport development in the south east.

We have all heard about Boris Island and estuary airports generally, additional runways at Heathrow or Gatwick or Stansted are all mentioned, but officialdom never mentions Manston. Why not?

If officialdom has something against Manston, let's hear what the objections are. To anyone with a modicum of common sense it is the obvious solution, particularly if one lives in east Kent.

Heathrow already has an excessive concentration of aircraft movements, any more would increase the likelihood of a serious accident.

Elizabeth Lonkhurst
Folkestone

Airport ready to be used

I am all for an estuary airport, but not on the Hoo peninsular.

There's a large airport on the market, which, like Hoo, is on the north Kent coast, virtually in the mouth of the Thames only a few miles from where Boris Johnson wants a third London Airport.

It has been there since 1916. The name of the place is Manston, with one of the longest runways in the country, and space for more.

Every time Boris keeps scaring the people of Hoo with his obsession to have a third London airport there, its inhabitants should shout loud and clear in Boris's ear: 'What's the matter with Manston, just down the road?'

Michael Wise via email

Boris Island is the answer

IF the government wants an all-singing, all-dancing new airport to put the world to shame and ease the congestion at Heathrow, then Manston or Lydd are not the answers.

Don't people who keep bringing it up as an option – who I guess don't live near either – realise that the poor people who live nearby and in the surrounding towns and villages will have their lives and the lives of their families ruined by noise and pollution?

If the Government want to operate an airport all day then it has to be built away from people's homes – in other words Boris Island, so that no one's life is ruined by it.

You have to applaud transport secretary Justine Greening for delaying her decision until all the findings on noise and pollution and the effects on lives are established.

All I would like to say to all the big chiefs like Willie Walsh and certain MPs, is to stop looking in your wallets and start putting peoples' lives first.
Mr J Williams, by email.

It's not got a 'huge runway'

I have seen yet another comment in your letters page about Manston's "huge runway" (Dave Powell, June 15). No it doesn't. And why does no-one point this out?

Manston will succeed as a minor airfield and we need a company that understands its limitations and does not produce another ridiculous business plan.

It amazes me that so many people are under the impression Manston has such a magnificent runway.

In the past I have seen comments from Adrian Ottley of Birchington that Manston has "long runways ideal for development". Manston has only one runway, east to west, with no available land upon which to build another, and its length is 2,658m (8,726 ft). Heathrow's main runways are 3,500m (11,500 ft) and 3,570m (11,750 ft). Gatwick's is 3,750m (10,100 ft).

Manston comes 11th in the list of longest runways, and has the eighth longest commercial runway. That does not represent "the longest runway in Europe" as stated in a previous edition by Ian R Swingland OBE.

The other major problem with Manston is there is no run off. A fully laden 747, for example, cannot take off from there because there is no leeway to abort a take off in case of a problem.

Don't bring danger here

WITH all the talk of airports possibly coming to our area, one thing people seem to forget is the stacking system, waiting to land. Think of all that pollution, when planes circle.

Another point is that nearly every day, somewhere around the world, a plane is dropping out of the sky, accidentally or otherwise. We don't want that risk here.

Les Brown, Rainham

Limit erodes our free will

HOW the Green Party must be in ecstasy now David Cameron has adopted their policy of speed limit downgrades to 20mph in towns and eventually 40mph elsewhere.

All over Britain councillors of all parties will be scrambling to appease NIMBY voters and reduce speed limits.

Higher fuel consumption and emissions, increased congestion, longer journey times are taken out of the equation. Influential camera manufacturers and associated industries and of course the selling of speed awareness courses are all in for a boom.

To quote a KCC document: "Unfortunately there is not yet any statistically significant evidence in Kent that simply reducing a national speed limit to 50mph has any effect on the frequency of road traffic crashes."

But they still go ahead anyway.

Find the worst sort of drivers and dumb everybody down accordingly, is Britain's road safety policy, any form of individualism or choice is wrenched from us by those wishing to control every aspect of our lives.

All the fantastic claims for improved accident figures in 20mph zones have not been proved, in many 'trial' areas, the accident rate is worse.

But what would you expect when your road safety policy consists of "hitting people at slower speeds kills fewer of them".

Millions of pounds are handed out to so-called road safety groups and charities, yet we still have no formal education-lead road safety policy.

Drivers seem reluctant to stick to the 30mph limit, so only by widespread surveillance and persecution will they drive at 20mph; 'big society' Mr Cameron?

Business Week

Your business is our business

This week we focus on opportunities for young people, who have suffered, as a group, more than most during the economic downturn. There is a number of positive schemes around, while forward-thinking companies are doing all they can. But what about young people themselves? Many are looking forward to fulfilling careers, but are they being realistic in their aims and aspirations?

Training helps create inspiration

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

ONE of the UK's leading communications companies has set up shop in Folkestone and is holding a two-week training programme to inspire young people.

The project by M&C Saatchi aims to bring creative and media businesses to east Kent just as they are currently established in places such as Brighton.

MP Damian Collins, who worked for the company, is behind the project, which is seeing 12 people aged 18-24 receive expert training.

They are also given the opportunity to look at media and communications opportunities and establish the networks which will help them to gain employment in a popular field.

It is based in the former Triennial Visitors Centre on the corner of The Old High Street and Tontine Street and follows a presentation by Google on the same site earlier in the year.

Collins said: "Those taking part will be able to participate in the kind of experience that people have only previously been able to be part of in London.

INSPIRED: MP Damian Collins with some of the young people on the training course

"I hope this project will inspire young people to think about working in the creative industries and also give them some useful contacts and ideas about how they could do this within our area.

"The creative industries are an important source of growth in our economies and are performing more strongly than many other sectors, even in these difficult economic times.

"We can see part of that success in the young businesses which are growing and developing in the Old Town area of Folkestone, in particular.

"I believe these creative businesses can be an important part of the future prosperity of our area, and that Folkestone and Shepway could be recognised alongside other centres like Brighton and Tunbridge Wells as an important hub for these businesses outside of London."

The project is taking place as Kent County Council plans to launch a new marketing campaign to promote business investment in Shepway and the other east Kent districts.

It will focus on the creative industries as one of the important growth areas of the local economy and also seek to encourage more businesses and people looking to invest in the area to apply for financial support from the Regional Growth Fund.

Collins said: "Having M&C Saatchi in town, just a couple of months since Google ran its business advice sessions from the same building in Folkestone, shows that major international companies are interested in what we have to say and offer. It will, I hope, also help create a bit of a buzz."

SURVEY

Predictions point to growth being slow

THE latest quarterly survey from the British Chambers of Commerce (BCC) of 8,000 small and medium-sized firms says the pace of activity is too slow for a sustainable recovery.

The survey found a further small rise in exporting activity among both the service sector and manufacturing firms in the three months to the end of June. Domestic activity, however, showed little net overall change.

The GDP figures due out are predicted by many analysts to show that the economy was declining in the second quarter of the year, partly because of the extra bank holiday.

Dan Wagner is CEO and founder of mPowa, a service dedicated to helping SMEs collect cash from their customers.

He said: "SMEs are the backbone of the British economy. They employ more than half the UK workforce and need urgent action from policymakers and the banking community. Access to capital is severely hampering growth and is often the single reason companies go under. We need to have a supportive framework in place to help businesses in Kent to thrive and flourish in challenging market conditions."

Avoid the congestion by renting some desk space

THE Olympics are fast approaching and Kent Enterprise House is offering office space to enable commuters to avoid travel hell throughout the London 2012 Games

The Government has advised more people to work from home as the transport network is expected to be extremely crowded.

National Rail has estimated that 300 million trips will be made by spectators within London during the Olympics, which will without doubt lead to congestion, delayed transport and late arrivals for those who commute to London.

So Kent Enterprise House, a charity-owned conference facility in Herne Bay, is to offer fully-serviced office space for £10 per day either within an open-plan office or private room.

Spaces are being offered to London commuters on a daily basis, so they have the option to book for the duration of the Olympics, a few days, or just a Friday.

To find out more, contact Kent Enterprise House by emailing info@enterprisetrust.org or phoning 01227 844 464.

AWARD

Recognition for efforts to help hopeful young entrepreneurs

LAW firm Cripps Harries Hall, based in Tunbridge Wells, has won an award for its work with Kent Foundation For Young Entrepreneurs, a charity that provides help for young people in Kent to establish and develop their business ideas.

Cripps was one of three organisations to be presented with the Impact Award at a celebration hosted by KCC chairman Richard King.

The award is in recognition of the significant impact that the firm's volunteers have made on the lives of young entrepreneurs in the county. Volunteers from Cripps have been trained as business mentors working alongside the young entrepreneurs to provide one-to-one support.

They have also been involved in delivering workshops and promoting Kent Foundation to the wider business community.

Paul Barron, director of Kent Foundation For Young Entrepreneurs, said: "We are very grateful for the support given by KCC and the INTERREG European Funding. However, we would not be able to operate our valuable and effective services without the support from our volunteers."

Ed Weeks, partner and head of corporate responsibility at Cripps, said: "We are delighted to receive this award in recognition of our volunteer work. We see this as an exciting opportunity to support our community by putting our skills and experience to use in a sustainable way. We look forward to continuing our work with Kent Foundation."

Chamber supports apprenticeships

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

BUSINESSES put off the idea of taking on an apprentice by the extra work needed to recruit, employ and train them can now take advantage of a new service.

Kent Channel Chamber of Commerce has launched an initiative to help small businesses take on an apprentice to help their enterprise grow – and young people between 16 and 24 get a 'real' job and the full range of work experience they need to support their apprenticeship qualification.

As part of a new consortium called Fusion Futures, the chamber will be providing a new service with one big benefit to local businesses.

Fusion Futures will employ the apprentice and loan them to the business until such time as they are happy to employ them directly – this could be between three and 12 months.

The idea is to reduce the initial risk, staff time and employment liability and realise significant cost-saving benefits that will contribute directly to bottom-line improvements.

Chamber chief executive Peter Hobbs said: "We know the many hoops businesses have to go through to plan for and employ a new apprentice. For every company currently employing an apprentice – about 200,000 nationwide – we believe there are double that who would take on an apprentice if all the organising and employment contract was done for them.

"Our new service is ideal for small companies that have limited capacity to employ apprentices direct or are uncertain if they could provide the breadth of work experience to support the training programme."

Nigel Horton-Baker, operations director for Fusion Futures said: "Our aim is to provide an independent, employer-driven brokerage service that will help businesses identify where the trainee can best add value within the organisation, draw up a job description, find the right trainee to suit your business and find the right training provider to support the trainee from its pool of high-quality and vetted training providers."

AGREEMENT: Nigel Horton-Baker and Peter Hobbs shake on the apprenticeship initiative

Scheme helps young people into the workplace

FIFTEEN young people are taking up an apprenticeship with West Kent Housing Association.

The community-based business, which provides affordable homes and services to people living in the county, is now providing a foot on the career ladder for a number of young people who have been unemployed for more than three months.

This has been made possible by the Kent Jobs For Kent Young People scheme, in which the county council has invested £2 million to help local employers take on more apprentices.

Businesses could take advantage of a £2,000 grant towards the employment costs – add in some national funding, wherever possible, and that figure more than doubles to £4,275.

James Woods is one of the 15 apprentices.

He said: "I've been on work-experience placements before, but this is the first time I've been offered a job with serious training and the chance to do something I enjoy that helps other people.

"I've been trying to get into work for a long time, but there aren't many jobs and when there are, there aren't many people willing to give a young person a chance."

Signing up for Kent Jobs For Kent Young People is easy and hassle-free. An apprenticeship team is available at the end of a phone on 0800 10 18 2 24 or alternatively by emailing kep@kent.gov.uk. KCC leader Paul Carter said:

GIVEN A CHANCE: Apprentice James Woods is vey pleased to be a part of the scheme

"James's experience is similar to a number of young people and it is for him and many others like him that the county council launched Kent Jobs For Kent Young People. West Kent Housing Association deserves great credit for providing 15 apprenticeships.

"We are working very hard to maximise the apprenticeship opportunities for young people. Unemployment figures are far, far too high in this country and we have put in £2m alongside national subsidy to create a scheme that declutters the bureaucracy for businesses wanting to take on an apprentice. The cost to employers is now as little as £52 a week to take on better-skilled, better-motivated young people. It is good for business and good for the young person."

The West Kent apprentices will be employed in a range of roles across the organisation and its charitable subsidiary, including plumbing, youth work and housing support.

Will Campbell-Wroe, managing director of West Kent's community development charity West Kent Extra, said: "We are pleased to be able to work closely with KCC to create these exciting new apprenticeships at West Kent.

"We know that the young people who come to West Kent will have a great experience that will hopefully set them on a career path they will enjoy.

"We see a large number of young people who struggle to get that first opportunity in the workplace and we are pleased to be able to offer them challenging and creative roles that will support them and the communities they live in.

"But we know this isn't all about the young people – they have many things to teach us as an organisation and these new roles give many of our own staff a first experience of line management.

"We believe these new posts will benefit the individuals, West Kent as an organisation, the Kent community and the Kent economy, so it was an easy decision for us to say yes to apprenticeships"

Many young lack career progression knowledge

WITH youth unemployment a continuing problem for both business and the Government, a new report reveals that far too many young people in Kent are ill-informed about their career options.

Joint research from the Financial Skills Partnership and Career Academies UK, based on a survey of 17- and 18-year-old Career Academies UK students, shows that many young people hold views about careers and how to progress that are not based on evidence.

According to the report, entitled Routes To Success, young people lack awareness of their options. This includes a misunderstanding of university fees, apprenticeships and school leaver programmes, and many young people are making poorly-informed choices that may affect their future career options and the talent pipeline for many industries.

The report calls on the Government, educators and employers to take concrete steps to address these issues and also suggests that there needs to be a single coherent message on career-progression routes.

Unemployment figures released by the Office For National Statistics show there has been a slight decline in the number of people out of work.

However, there are still too many young people, from school-leavers to graduates, unemployed and searching for a job or training.

The report revealed:

■ A greater number of students seriously considering university as their preferred route than the number who strongly agreed that they knew a lot about it.

■ Young people believed they had a high level of awareness of apprenticeships, but further questioning revealed their knowledge was inaccurate and shallow.

■ Young people were unsure of the status of school-leaver programmes and how to find these opportunities.

■ Work experience was viewed as essential, but outside the formal Career Academies internship programme their experience of placements was poor.

■ Young people were ambitious and understood the value of employability skills and real work experience.

Liz Field, CEO of the Financial Skills Partnership, said: "Young people in Kent are making poorly-informed choices, which may affect their future career options and the talent pipeline for many industries.

"The research shows that many young people know far too little about their potential career options and that employers, educators and the Government could all do more to help.

"We need to equip young people with the knowledge and skills to take responsibility for their own career-planning and progression if they are to be the professionals of tomorrow, able to lead us out of recession and into growth and renewal."

Animal magic is helping pupils to get top results

IT is easy to dismiss the life of a wildlife park as a lot of monkey business.

But two of the county's premier parks are proving to be exceptional outdoor classrooms, attracting thousands each year to visit and learn Howletts, in Bekesbourne near Canterbury, and Port Lympne near Hythe, are both under the remit of the Aspinall Foundation.

A dedicated education team is on hand to supply curriculum material to schools in Kent and nationwide aimed at all levels of learning.

The parks also host school visits and last year more than 11,000 pupils visited.

The parks' education team also organise team building courses, student workshops and deliver talks to community groups, such as the WI and schools.

This year, Port Lympne plays host to three conferences where keepers, educators and researchers from all round the globe can meet to discuss and share ideas and comment on the latest developments in the animal and horticultural world.

The parks also host students studying animal management from the UK and Europe so that they can bolster their classroom studies with hands-on experience. Currently there are 23 students working across both parks.

The Aspinall Foundation educates further afield and offers outreach programmes to schools in Congo and Gabon, Java and Madagascar to educate people about the conservation work that the charity carries out with critically endangered western lowland gorillas, primates such as Javan langurs and Javan gibbons and lemurs in Madagascar.

Visit www.aspinallfoundation.org for further information about the foundation's conservation work, or to book a school visit, team building course or work experience placements and other educational talks.

BIG names set to gather for STEM sector event

A SPECIAL event uniting key players in science, technology, engineering and manufacturing (STEM) related industries with the University of Greenwich takes place this coming Wednesday in Chatham.

Members of the BIG (Business Innovation Group) Kent network and companies involved in the key sectors are all putting their weight behind the big summer event, which takes place on July 25.

The free summer event and exhibition at the St George's Centre at Medway Chatham Maritime will feature a series of presentations from senior industrial and academic speakers on issues that are key to the STEM sections.

There will also be presentations from senior members of the financial services sector delivering advice on research and development tax credits, capital allowances, venue capital investments and commercial banking issues, which affect companies operating within STEM sectors.

The BIG-Kent Summer Event will also offer networking opportunities with sector specialists and will end with a panel debate exploring how science, technology, engineering and manufacturing sectors can stimulate the economy. See www.big-kent.org.uk for details.

Decorated students are proof an eye for design can reap the rewards

HAVING an eye for detail and a flair for the artistic is not always something you can be taught. But a college course is proving a hit by promoting just that, and it's expecting a bumper turn-out for an upcoming interior design course.

Some 14 men and women emerged clutching a qualification at the end of last term after the 10-week certificate in creative techniques (interior design) course at MidKent College's Maidstone campus.

Launched in January, it is once again featured in the part-time prospectus for 2012/13.

And, with that success, course leader Ellie Bentley is now accepting applications from prospective students for the next academic year.

She said: "Programmes like Changing Rooms and 60-Minute Makeover are great for generating interest but in reality they don't work.

"People need to know how to use the techniques shown on television, otherwise they'll end up with the most awful results.

"Most people think it costs the earth but it really doesn't. All you need to do is learn how to work with what you've got and change it into something completely different.

"I've been an interior designer for about 14 years and it's something I'm passionate about, which is why I wanted to launch this course and help to ignite other people's creativity."

Former secondary school teacher Janet Lowther, 57, from Maidstone, received a place on the course as a Christmas present from her partner.

She is now considering moving on to the 17-week interior design certificate – which also serves as a stand-alone course for more advanced students – after successfully completing the award qualification.

She said: "I started to try and change my partner's house around when I moved in with him, so it's nice to be able to say I know what I'm doing.

"I knew what looked good before but I didn't know why, and that's where the course has helped me the most – by teaching me things like line, shape, form and mirroring.

"Now the top floor of our house is being completely re-jigged thanks to what I've learned."

Other construction craft subjects available to study part-time at MidKent College include carpentry, bricklaying, bench joinery, and painting and decorating.

DESIGN FOR LIFE: Successful students with their work after the 10-week course

College cooks up a recipe for success

A TEAM of Thanet College catering students is celebrating being named Young Restaurant Team of the Year at the first ever competition held at the Skills for Chefs Conference in Sheffield.

Professional cookery level two students Daniel Read, Daniel Levey and Kyle Hadley-Quinn, who study food and beverage service level two, cooked and served a two-course meal for seven judges, including Andrew Bennett MBE, food and beverage director at Sheraton Park Lane; Nigel Craine, founder of cooking products manufacturer Essential Cuisine; and TV chef Alan Murchison.

The team's menu consisted of seabass with smoked pommes puree and fennel, followed by a dessert of flambéed compressed apricots with chocolate parfait and toasted almond and amaretto ice cream.

The dessert featured a 'kitchen theatre' style serving, with Daniel Read displaying food on a bespoke driftwood stand at one end of the table whilst Kyle flambéed apricots at the other.

The show continued as Kyle juggled flaming amaretto before finishing it with tonka-infused coffee and vanilla cream.

Chef tutor Rob Allsworth accompanied the students to the conference, and was delighted with their efforts.

He said: "Feedback from the judges was superb, with one comment that the teams' service was as good as a Michelin-starred establishment. Lecturers and students alike had a terrific experience, meeting chefs and industry peers and forging bonds that will help them all through their careers."

Thanet College – which is set to change its name to East Kent College for the start of the next term won a trophy and prizes. As part of their prize they will also have the opportunity to visit top London restaurant Galvin at Windows, situated on the 28th floor of the Park Lane Hilton Hotel.

Head chef Andre Garrett and Fred Siriex, front of house, will treat them to skills sessions.

Schools & education

Two million reasons why staff are looking forward for start of term

AS schools and colleges across Kent break up for the summer, staff at Rochester Independent College are preparing for a busy six weeks, putting the finishing touches to their £2 million campus redevelopment.

The college has grown since 1984 from one building to 13.

New for September will be an underground hall with seating for 100 people and the first use of a new building acquisition, New Court at the corner of New Road and Star Hill.

Founding principal Brian Pain said: "Our underground building is an exciting development and has been designed to house a lecture hall accommodating up to 100 people.

"It is hugely insulated and therefore energy efficient and heated by an air source heat pump. It will provide a new home for the college's drama department. The copper canopied roof will be transformed into an open-air theatre auditorium in the summer months with productions from visiting troupes and students. Low voltage electrical installation and modern construction techniques give the building a minimal carbon footprint."

The college's 2012 expansion has been supported by the Swedish bank, Handelsbanken.

Mr Pain added: "We are investing significantly in the campus and next academic year will see a dedicated arts and crafts centre established."

Encouraging more of our young people to stick with education

A GOVERNMENT commitment to keep teenagers in school until they are 18 is set to see a major focus put on keeping those aged 16 plus in full-time education.

The Government has given a commitment that all young people should have the opportunity to develop the skills they need for adult life and employment.

As part of this, the participation age for young people to remain in education or training is being raised to 18 by 2015.

To give young people in Kent the opportunity to gain key skills and qualifications, KCC will be improving the available learning options and the range of vocational qualifications on offer.

Mike Whiting, KCC cabinet member for education learning and skills, said: "We'll be working closely with our partners, further education colleagues, schools, employers and work-based learning providers.

"By coming together, we can make sure we provide more apprenticeships, pre-apprenticeship programmes and improved vocational qualifications with meaningful work experience. No less vital are academic courses – and making sure that there are quality work experience opportunities to go with them.

FOCUSED: Keeping teenagers engaged with full time education courses is no mean feat

"The value of good education and training can never be underestimated. Providing a wide variety can help us to offer each individual the right course and the right curriculum."

Rubber stamp given for college's £20m town centre relocation

A PROPOSAL to relocate Bexley College to a new state-of-the-art facility at Stonewood Road in Erith town centre has been approved.

The development of the college will see £20 million of investment in the area, which will include a new pedestrian walkway to the station.

The construction of the college building is made possible by the development of housing on the college's existing site at Tower Road.

This move significantly increases and improves the educational opportunities for young people in Erith and Bexley, said education chiefs.

With planning permission granted, the college is now on track to open the new building in September 2014.

College principal Danny Ridgeway said: "I am delighted we have been given the go ahead to build a new £20m college in Erith town centre. I would like to thank people for the overwhelming support we have received from the local community and local businesses.

"This is good news for staff and students since it secures the future of a rapidly improving college.

"It is welcome news for the businesses of Erith because of the spending power of our staff and students. It's also great news for the community that will have top learning facilities for decades to come."

HIGHER EDUCATION

at half the cost of university

North West Kent College offers a range of Higher Education (HE) courses at half the cost of University. From £4,995 students can gain a foundation degree qualification or Higher National Diploma/Certificate and improve their chances of employability while still living at home.

The Dartford campus, where most of the courses will be delivered from, offers free parking and is accessible by easy transport links via rail, bus and the College free shuttle bus.

The College provides Foundation Degrees affiliated by The University of Greenwich and Higher National Diplomas/Certificates (HND/C) by Edexcel.

These qualifications involve close links to industry, and after two years students have the opportunity to apply to top-up their qualification to a degree, or go straight into industry. It is also possible to work while studying on several of the HE programmes.

The HE courses include: Business, Early Years, Photography, Professional Writing, Sports Science and Sports Studies. The College are also introducing new HE courses from September, in: Performing Arts, Travel and Tourism and Public Services. In addition, the College offers a part-time HNC in Electronic and Electrical Engineering at the Gravesend campus.

Sports Science is based on the science behind Curriculum Manager for Higher Education, which underpins the theory and practical elements of a range of cost of tuition fees is making it difficult for subjects including: practical sports people to go to University. We are confident performance, fitness training, sports that by offering higher education courses at a lower cost, it will make it easier for potential students to achieve this."

The Business HND develops the knowledge, skills and attributes appropriate to administrative and management careers in a variety of areas of business. Elements of the course include: quantitative techniques, economics and business functions.

The Early Years Foundation Degree provides opportunities to progress into teaching or management with a potential progression onto an Early Years Professional Status course. The course will benefit students by developing confidence for the work place, problem solving and project management.

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL (A2260 HALL ROAD, NORTHFLEET AND SOUTHFLEET) (CONVERSION OF FOOTWAY TO SEGREGATED CYCLE TRACK) HIGHWAYS ACT 1980

(A2260 HALL ROAD AND HALL ROAD, NORTHFLEET) (TOUCAN CROSSINGS)

ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council, in exercise of its powers under sections 65 and 66 (1) of the Highways Act 1980 and all other enabling powers, intends to remove the existing cycle lane from the north western carriageway of the A2260 Hall Road, Northfleet and Southfleet; and install a new cycle track with segregated pedestrian / cycle facilities on the north western footway instead from a point 72 metres north east of the mid point of its roundabout junction with Station Road to a point 30 metres south west of the common boundary between numbers 47 and 49, which is a distance of 152 metres; and under Section 23 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 and all other enabling powers, intends to install Toucan Crossings on Hall Road, Northfleet and A2260 Hall Road Northfleet and Southfleet, Kent. The Toucan Crossing on the A2260 Hall Road is located on the north western carriageway, approximately 120 metres north east of the mid point of its roundabout junction with Station Road and the Toucan Crossing on Hall Road is located approximately 60 metres south east of the mid point of its roundabout junction with B262 Springhead Road, Northfleet.

The purpose of the scheme is to provide a safe place for pedestrians and cyclists to cross as there are concerns over safety within the area. The existing pedestrian island is used by an increased number of cyclists, school children and shoppers using nearby facilities and a high population from the surrounding residential housing estates.

Toucan Crossings are designed for both pedestrians and cyclists and are typically used adjacent to a shared use footway (Cyclists are not allowed to cross the road using Zebra, Pelican or Puffin crossings). There is a green cycle symbol alongside the green man and the crossing time is established each time by on-crossing detectors. The pedestrians and cyclists in the area would therefore benefit from the introduction of a Toucan Crossing to assist with the high pedestrian / cycle movements throughout the area.

All previous Orders made by The Kent County Council with reference to the existing cycle lane which runs on the north western carriageway A2260 Hall Road, Northfleet from a point 110 metres north east of the mid point of its roundabout junction with Station Road to a point 30 metres south west of the common boundary between numbers 47 and 49 are hereby revoked.

Jacobs Engineering UK LTD. has been commissioned by the Council to publish the Notice of intent at the same time as providing notification to all interested parties and complies with the requirements of Section 23(2) of the Road Traffic Regulation Act, 1984.

Copies of the plan showing this proposal an explanatory statement and a map showing the extents of the scheme may be inspected during normal office hours at The Kent County Council Offices, Sessions House, County Road, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XX, at Gravesham Borough Council Offices, Civic Centre, 132 Windmill Street, Gravesend, Kent, DA12 1AU and at Dartford Borough Council offices, Civic Centre, Home Gardens, Dartford, Kent, DA1 1DR. The documents are also available to see on the Kent County Council website.

Anyone wishing to support, or object to the proposal to remove the existing cycle lane and introduce a new cycle track on the A2260 Hall Road, Northfleet and Southfleet should write to Diane Bourne, Jacobs Engineering UK Ltd, Miller House, Lower Stone Street, Maidstone, Kent, ME15 6GB quoting the name of the Order and reference No "B1804700" and stating their reasons, by not later than Monday 13th August 2012.

Kent County Council has temporarily closed Public Footpath DR1, from its junction with Claire Causeway / Crossways Boulevard to Thames Street, from the 16th July 2012.

The path will be closed for a maximum of six months.

The path is to be closed because construction works are planned near it and there is a likelihood of danger to users.

The alternative route is to continue east along Crossways Boulevard, and then north for approximately 80 metres along Thames Street to re-join DR1 at this point, and will be signed for the duration of the closure.

Carpet burning Britpop lives PAGE 30

THE INTERVIEW

Stephen Holt

Back on the Inspiral Carpet

Band's frontman talks to Joe Bill about the growing revival of 80s Britpop

WITH the shock return of Madchester front runners The Stone Roses and the resurrection of bands like Blur and Happy Mondays, it is hard to escape the feeling that we are in some way returning to the glorious indie days of Britpop.

Stars of the late 80s and early 90s are popping up across the summer-festival line-ups, and no more so than at the Sound Island Festival at Quex Park, near Birchington, where no fewer than six bands have signed up for a Britpop reunion show.

Leading the pack of duffle-coat-clad rockers are Manchester's Inspiral Carpets, fronted by Stephen Holt.

"It will be great – let's just hope the weather holds off. It is a bit of a Manchester versus Liverpool thing. There is James and us, Echo and the Bunnymen, Space, The Farm and Cast, so a Merseyside versus Manchester music off.

"There is a lot of debate at the moment, with us coming back and The Stone Roses and Happy Mondays.

"Some people say – although I don't agree with it – that modern music and the stuff that is around at the moment can't be any good because everybody keeps going back to the late 80s and 90s. Everyone harks back to a 20-year period and people say 'Oh yeah, it was magical in those days and the music was brilliant'.

"There is obviously a love and a need for that Britpop-era music again, but I don't think it weakens the argument of either era. There are some great new bands I love and that are doing really well and there is an appetite for that, but I think there is also an appetite for people going back and listening to older stuff.

"We did it in the 80s, too, relisting to 60s music and remembering, but it doesn't mean that one is better than the other."

The frontman, who formed the band in 1983, was one of the main figures on the Madchester scene, with the Carpets gaining a large fan base that included the likes of DJ John Peel.

Holt left the band in 1990 and went on to form The Rainkings before eventually returning to complete the original Inspiral Carpets line-up in 2011. And the group are back producing music, touring the world and selling out gigs, much like their Britpop counterparts.

"I still listen to loads of new stuff and am going out to see new bands and downloading new stuff as well. But what I have noticed now is there doesn't seem to be any divide between 'I like indie, or rock, or dance' – it seems everyone listens to everything.

"And I think this goes for the bands that are around now, too, as they have a wide range of influences and aren't defined. There's probably a bit of a gap now with those people into one kind of genre, like indie, and the likes of The Stone Roses or Happy Mondays or us are filling it."

And since returning to form last year, Inspiral Carpets have bagged gigs in Europe, South America and a number of UK festivals, with their legions of fans still turning out to hear the indie-rockers play their big hits like This Is How It Feels and Dragging Me Down.

"Our fans have just got fatter and balder," said Holt. "There are still young people in our audiences. And I'm sure there are still young fans who want a taste of the Britpop era, but generally the people who watch us were probably around in the early days.

"We're all still based in Manchester and it's buzzing up here at the moment. We are getting some really good bands coming through. I was listening to [BBC] 6 Music and there was a young rapper saying that there's a huge rap scene in Manchester at the moment.

"But there's still a lot of indie and I think they are trying to get together and re-create that sort of old Madchester thing."

Madchester, or even Manchester, has become a big player in British music, with The Charlatans and Oasis maintaining the trend and representing the city's rocking roots all the way through the 90s and into the Noughties.

"It's weird looking back at that era because back then it was just the norm, everyone being around and in bands," said Holt. "There used to be a club called The Boardwalk, which was an indie venue where I and the other Carpets used to hang around. They had rehearsal rooms, too, and Happy Mondays would use them.

"I wasn't much of a Hacienda person myself, but loads of bands and people rose up in there. We were just having a laugh, getting up and doing gigs and then going to see other people perform. Looking back now, I see it was something special, but you don't realise it at the time."

The Carpets have already run a mini tour in the UK and, like Blur and The Stone Roses, have produced new material.

Holt said: "I left the band in the early 90s and had a break for 20-odd years. I keep telling everyone that I popped out of rehearsals for a pint of milk and never returned.

"But we've been writing new stuff and released the single You're So Good For Me in November on iTunes and came out on vinyl in March and that has done OK. Hopefully, we'll release some other bits early next year."

And with Happy Mondays returning, the Carpets also thought it would be a good idea to tour with them.

"They have calmed down loads. Bez is still a little wild, but he's doing more DJ-ing now. The rest of the lads are very calm and got their heads back in gear and on the music."

One reason the Carpets' name has stood the test of time is their links with Oasis guitarist Noel Gallagher, who was their roadie for a time in the early 90s.

"Everyone speaks really fondly of Noel and he has spoken fondly of his time with us."

And as the date in Thanet fast approaches, Holt is keen to show fans they have still got it.

"I think fans coming to us for the first time will be treated to a really good show. Back when we started we were a bit of a garage band and a bit punky and used to get on stage and thrash out some tunes. But everyone admits we lost that over the years and went into a bit of a ballad-type band like Coldplay or Snow Patrol.

"But since coming back we've returned to our roots and we're lively and get the audience involved and smash out some hits."

• The Inspiral Carpets gig will be at the Sound Island Festival, Quex Park, which runs on Saturday and Sunday, July 28-29. For details, or to book tickets, visit www.gigantic.com or phone 0844 888 9991. Tickets can also be booked by visiting Margate Winter Gardens.

Contest rewards a growing interest in art

WHILE all eyes fell on the capital for this month's London Olympic Games, six groups of Kent primary-schoolchildren were limbering up for a very different kind of competition.

The youngsters were taking part in the live final for Create A Fruit & Veg Masterpiece 2012 at Broadview Gardens, Hadlow.

The six finalists beat their way past 250 entrants from across the county as the Produced in Kent-inspired art competition got into full flow, with TV's top food art photographer Carl Warner looking on.

Competing for gold, silver and bronze medals, the pupils re-created their entries in front of the judges, using only fruit and vegetables grown locally and in season in the Garden of England.

Julie Monkman, manager of Produced in Kent, said: "There have been many initiatives to try to engage young children with their environment and eating healthy, from mothers' 'eat your greens' to '5-A-Day'. This competition has shown you can make eating healthily, locally and seasonally entertaining and engaging."

In the individual category a gold medal went to Adam Hood, seven, from Hever primary; Joshua Beesley, who is home-schooled, won silver; and five-year-old Will Beverley, also from Hever primary, won bronze.

In the group category the gold medal went to Class 6W, St Katherine's, Snodland; silver to the All Saints C of E primary school's allotment club, Chatham; and bronze to Class 2T, Ashford Friars.

As well as their medals and a delicious afternoon tea provided by abm Catering at Broadview Tearooms, the children walked away with an armful of fantastic prizes. These included framed food-art pictures and books from Carl Warner, a signed book

Be a hero and help a hero Music festival

The Red Lion, Gravesend

Saturday, July 28
www.facebook.com/herofestredlion

THE third annual Herofest will take place at the end of this month to raise money for the Help For Heroes charity, which looks after injured soldiers as they return from serving their country.

Herofest is a charity music festival held at The Red Lion in Gravesend and has already raised more than £6,000 for the organisation in the past couple of summers.

There are four stages at the venue and each one will have bands on until 10pm, followed by the headline acts on the main stage, who this year are local bands Stone Wire and Bad Sign.

There will be a whopping 45 acts throughout the day, with all proceeds going to Help For Heroes.

Entry to the festival is only £6 and the show gets under way at 12.30pm.

HONDA has finally come up with just the little piece of improvisation that its Jazz supermini-cum-MPV needed.

Long a favourite for its versatility and space, the Jazz still lacked something in the image department – the new and sporty-looking Si version (£14,550) rectifies that.

The Japanese marque is calling the Si a limited edition, which is a great way of starting a stampede to showrooms before they all go, but it's actually hard to see it disappearing unless replaced by yet another sporty special.

Just to quicken the pace of demand further, the Si is also being offered on a zero per cent private lease deal (PCP) of £149 per month with a 27 per cent deposit.

The Jazz (from £11,605) is one Honda's best sellers, no doubt helped by the car wearing a Made in Britain stamp courtesy of manufacture at the brand's Swindon plant, but it's also famous for its Tardis-like capacity within relatively compact dimensions and clever packaging such as pull-up rear seat bases, allowing extra stowage or side-loading of a bicycle, for instance.

All this has translated into a string of awards, most recently the JD Power customer satisfaction and reliability survey's supermini of the year and Which? best used supermini.

However, the car has struggled a little for style and image, something the Si rectifies.

For a start, it will only be sold in sharp colours – black, bright red, white and bright blue – and wears bespoke sports bumpers and side skirts privacy glass and 16-inch alloys.

It's not all cosmetics, though; the suspension has been beefed up to deliver improved straight-line stability and body control, while the electric power-steering has been tweaked for improved feel and response.

Nevertheless, Honda insists these driver-pleasing changes have not been made at the expense of the standard car's ride and long-distance refinement.

The interior also gets the Si treatment, with a leather-trimmed steering wheel, bespoke black and silver supportive seats and cruise control.

A Si-T flagship version is also available for £15,545 and benefits from the addition of sat-nav and integrated Bluetooth.

The Si is based on the existing 1.4ES model (£13,750), which has a 98bhp petrol engine and five-speed gearbox and is capable of averaging more than 50mpg.

No diesels are offered in the Jazz line-up – not that Driving is a fan of small diesels as they cost more upfront and rarely recoup that extra cash by covering enough miles to enjoy the engine's superior economy against a petrol unit.

And that same argument may also apply to Honda's eco alternative for the Jazz, a petrol-electric hybrid from £16,300 and averaging about 10mpg more than the 1.4-litre unit on the Si but only slightly faster in acceleration.

ON THE ROAD TO SUCCESS:

The Si is welcomed by drivers and dealers alike for bringing style to an already award-winning model

DON'T LIKE

... the way the Jazz has been allowed to plod along with a slightly dreary look and image when there is an award-winning car underneath

NOT SURE

... this ordinary image can be turned around overnight, but the launch of the Si is certainly a shot in the arm, welcomed by buyers and sellers

REALLY LIKE

... the underlying honesty and practicality of the British-built Jazz and it's pleasing to see this sexier and smarter Si variation. More please...

Alto hits high notes for less

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

SUZUKI has claimed the title of cheapest car on UK roads with a £5,995 deal on its Alto city car, available until Sunday, September 30.

This represents a £670 saving on any previous Alto sales campaigns and is well below the official list price of £7,195.

The Alto is a compact five-door hatchback with just one engine option, a frugal 1.0-litre three-cylinder petrol unit, offering high fuel efficiency – 65.7mpg on the official combined cycle – and low CO₂ (99gm/km) emissions, making it road-tax-exempt.

That also means it escapes the London Congestion Charge, potentially saving £2,600 a year for any west Kent commuter who must travel into the capital five days a week.

Admittedly, the 67bhp engine is no ball of fire – 0-60mph in 13.5 seconds – but the Alto is about motoring on a shoestring, and even attracts a thrifty group four for insurance.

The Japanese marque has also announced an upgrade to its Splash mini-MPV line-up while pegging prices, which start at £7,777.

Changes include new front and rear bumpers, new bonnet and grille, new body colours, revised seat fabrics and colours, shiny black finish to centre console and black-cloth finish to the front-door armrests.

What hasn't changed is the little car's versatility, thanks to its tall body offering good headroom and, with rear seats folded, lots of cargo capacity; it is perhaps one of the most underrated small-load-luggers, despite being sharply priced against rivals like the Honda Jazz.

Two petrol engines are offered. The same 1.0-litre unit is offered on the Alto, though in different tune, so emissions are slightly higher, with zero road tax in year one, but £20/year thereafter. For those needing more dash, meanwhile, there's also a 93bhp four-cylinder unit, also tax-exempt in year one but then costing £30/year.

If you prefer to cut a dash, then you might like to hear that Suzuki has launched its largest-ever clothing and merchandise collection.

It comprises all-new lines, moving away from conventional-car-branded designs to ones closer to high-street fashion labels and dreamed up by European designers, though they make heavy use of Japanese script.

Running to keep fit for football leads to Olympic stardom for ace Gemili

By Greg Miles

greg.miles@archant.co.uk

A lot can change in a year, just ask British sprinting sensation Adam Gemili.

A little over 12 months ago the Dartford teenager was scraping the dried mud off his boots getting ready for some hard running in pre-season training with Dagenham & Redbridge.

Now he is a week away from starring in the biggest sporting spectacle on the planet having taken the 100m by storm in the last two months - culminating in a gold-medal winning run in the World Junior Championships in Barcelona last week.

That run also made him the fastest ever Brit for his age, beating Dwain Chambers' 15 year record of 10.06.

The 18-year-old Blackheath and Bromley AC ace has admitted his rise to fame has been a surprise even for him.

"I'm very surprised," he said. "Everything has escalated in the last six to eight weeks, and I've become well known, but I'm enjoying it.

"I was only really doing it to get fit for football, I never expected to run anywhere near where I have been able to run.

"This time a year ago I had just started getting into pre-season training so I never expected to have any of this."

With one Gold medal already in the bag public expectation has understandably soared, but the level-headed former Chelsea apprentice insists there is no pressure on him.

"I'm just really enjoying it, just making the most of it, because it won't last forever," he said. "While people want to talk to me I'm loving it.

"I'm not setting myself any goals, or saying I'm going to get to this or that round, I'm going for the experience.

"I know I'm in shape and with the times I'm running hopefully I can run even quicker than I have done.

"Everyone is really excited for the Olympics, people are expecting me to perform, but I don't feel the expectations to get a medal or make the final.

"I'm going there to have fun and get a good experience, to do my best, and if that gets me to the semi-final then that's what happens."

His experience in Barcelona has made him even more excited for what lays ahead in east London.

"It's given me a lot of confidence, the championships were amazing, the Olympics is going to be a thousand times better.

"I couldn't believe it, I saw 10.05s, and I was in bits, I was so happy, I was jumping up and down, I was loving it."

It would be easy for such achievements to go to a young man's head, however the support that Gemili has in place means his feet are firmly on the ground and he is already thinking about post-Olympic life.

"I put it down to my parents if I'm honest with you," he said. "My family are so great in keeping me on the right path, if it happened to another athlete they might get big headed and have a big ego, but they keep me level headed.

"The academic side of things was a big part of my upbringing. When I was younger and playing for Chelsea (the club) they wanted me to take time off school, but we left the club because my parents wanted me to get a good education so I thank my mum because I wouldn't be

EXCITED: Gemili is expecting the Olympics to be a thousand times better than Barcelona last week where he set a new championship record in the 100m World Junior Championships final

DARTFORD DAYS NOT A DISTANT MEMORY

JUST a few years ago Adam Gemili fell over as he crossed the finishing line because his technique was a bit rusty - mind you he still won the race.

But it's a reminder of just how far he has come on his journey to Gold at the World Junior Championships.

It's a story being regularly told at Dartford Grammar School where Gemili spent his teenage years.

"It wasn't until Year 10 that he began to realise he was half decent at it," recalls head of sport at the school Gary Jones.

"I really noticed when he won the regional athletics finals, he fell at the finish line because his technique was a bit untidy. He fell flat on his face and injured himself, he was supposed to do the long jump later that day."

Even a few years earlier he stuck out like a saw thumb in the school sports day.

"The thing that sticks in my mind is I said to the head teacher, 'watch this, this will be something special'.

"He was racing against two other lads from football clubs who were both fantastically fast, but he obliterated them, absolutely destroyed them."

Gemili joined Blackheath and Bromley AC as he began to take the sport more seriously.

Men's team manager at the club Patrick Calnan said: "It's remarkable the progress he's made in such a short space of time.

"It's often said that footballers are not as fit as athletes, but you couldn't really say that about him when he joined.

"When I saw him run for the first time it was just raw talent."

"I'm hoping to go to university starting in September because I've just graduated from college. I want to study sports science, anatomy, it helps you figure out and learn more about your body."

Earlier this year he jetted off to the States to learn from the second fastest man in the world, Tyson Gay, which proved a valuable experience.

"I trained in April and March period in Florida, it was really good and a great experience seeing how they train, seeing what's different and the level they are at," he said.

"Everyone helped each other, we all joked around with each other, he (Gay) gave me a few tips about my start, everyone was there to help."

The academic approach is one that is so often overlooked by professional sportsmen and women, but for now he is focusing on the Olympics, be it in reality or on screen when he plays athletics games on his Nintendo Wii.

"I play on the Playstation and watch a bit of telly. I chill out with my friends and try and relax," he said.

"We play the Sonic and Mario thing on the Wii as well which is good fun.

"I just try and recover, that's the main thing, just try and relax, because it's a mental sport."

Brickies' phone off the hook as players vie to join squad

By Greg Miles
greg.miles@archant.co.uk

JOINT Sittingbourne boss Danny Ward admits to being pleasantly surprised at how the rebuilding process has gone at the club.

He and his brother Jim were faced with recruiting nearly a full squad after taking over last month, but have been inundated with phone calls from players wanting to join, and while some moves have fallen through, Ward is pleased with the progress made.

"It's looking quite promising," he said. "They are all young, athletic and dynamic, but it wasn't when we got here.

"It's looking a lot better than I thought it would be, there are a lot of clubs having more trouble than we are.

"I am pleasantly surprised - they all told me the money wouldn't get a side together. The whole place is buzzing to be honest with you."

Deals were finalised this week for John Nwoko, Elie Kayambe, Jonathan Hogg, Curtis Winnett, Nick Tredwell, Bradley Spice, and Ashley Ulph for the forthcoming season, while he is hoping four more will join at the end of this week.

He begrudgingly had to let a number of trialists go as well after an in-house friendly on Tuesday night.

"It's a pity, because if we had a reserve side they could fight for their place," he said. "There was a bit of pressure on them, but we have signed some on dual registration and they will go to Kent league clubs.

"Some of the football at times was excellent, it was the first time a lot of them had kicked a ball in a while. If their attitude wasn't right we would cast them aside, but everybody is doing what's asked of them."

CHANGE: The match against the Academy has been re-scheduled to take place at Bourne Park

Fans got to see just 45 minutes of them in action in their opening pre-season game last Saturday against Sittingbourne Academy as heavy rain ended proceedings. However it has been re-arranged to take place tomorrow in a noon kick-off at Bourne Park.

They will also play Milton and Fulston on Tuesday night in a 7.45pm kick off at the same venue. It had previously been pencilled in to take place at Sittingbourne Academy.

Togetherness key to success as Town kick off pre-season

RAY Turner is hoping his new Faversham recruits can gel quickly as they head into their second pre-season game tomorrow.

The Lilywhites' starting line-up on Tuesday night in their first friendly against Canterbury City featured just two names that started last season.

Turner's side scored all three goals in the 2-1 loss as new boy Aidan Sherlock netted two own goals.

Turner was happy with the performance but knows they are in for a tougher test when they host Blue Square South side Welling United tomorrow.

"When we started there were just two from last year," he said. "It's a massive overhaul, we need to come together and do that quickly and get to know each other, that's what we've got to do.

"Most will be involved again on Saturday and we will have a look at a different way of playing."

The Wings go into the game having thrashed Cray Valley PM 6-0 on the same night Turner's side lost.

"It's going to be hard, but it will be a good work out defensively, we will set ourselves up in a different way of playing, we want to be more adaptable at times."

He said it was unlikely any more players would be joining his side, but is hopeful of bringing in Herne Bay defender Toby Ashmore who played against Canterbury.

"He's come over and done a couple of training seasons, and we will see if we can do something," he said. "He's having a look here and hopefully we can get him on board.

"We are quite happy now and will work with what we have got."

RUGBY

Fun day to support family of former Sheppey player

A FAMILY fun day is being held at Sheppey Rugby Club tomorrow in memory of former player Steve Croall who died a year ago.

The 28-year-old prop was a well known figure in rugby circles having played to a high standard with Sheppey, Rotherham, London Welsh, Cambridge, and Westcombe Park.

The event has been organised to raise money for the Croally Croall Trust Fund, which will support his children.

First team coach Peter Oliver said: "He was massive in rugby, he was well known. We could not fit everybody in the church at his funeral. It should be a good day."

His brother Aston, who plays for Harlequins, has been growing a beard since the funeral and will do a sponsored shave on the day to raise funds.

There will also be a match against the Medway Dragons rugby league side, children's coaching sessions with Harlequins players, numerous stalls, a barbecue, live bands, a tug of war, face painting, and a disco.

Admission is £1, while children are free. Gates open at 10am at the club in Lower Road.

The Oliver Smith Appeal will also benefit from 25 per cent of the proceeds.

For more information about the trust fund visit www.croallycroall-trustfund.co.uk.

CRICKET

All games called off for first time in eight years

NOT for eight years has Kent's regional cricket leagues suffered a complete washout.

All 60 of the fixtures around the county were abandoned, it's thought without even a ball being bowled, as the heavens opened across the south east last weekend.

The last time every single fixture was affected was on May 8, 2004 according to the records of league administrator Errol Valentine.

He said: "I would have thought it's an extremely rare occurrence. When we started the season in May there were hosepipe bans. Clubs were worried they wouldn't be able to produce wickets. It's all a bit of a mess, we have been swamped with water ever since.

"Everyone is very despondent about it. Keeping a stiff upper lip is probably the best way of describing how people are dealing with it."

He warned that if games continued to get abandoned in the next month or so, serious consideration will have to be given to whether it would be fair to promote or relegate sides.

It nearly happened in 2001 as a result of a high number of postponements in the early part of the season, but the sun prevailed and the idea was scrapped.

"There haven't been any really massive scores, normally you would get some weekends where everyone gets 250 plus," he said. "It's not been a batter's year.

"There have been other years where we have had four or five abandoned matches, but if we have seven weeks of sunshine and complete cricket it won't stand out as being an unusual summer."
